The Addons market is a great place to discover valuable software that is used every day by millions of people around the world. We can guarantee you'll find something useful in this category. We have updated the official app for Android TV devices that support Google Assistant. The new version of the

Google Assistant is now available on Android TV for devices running Android 5.0 and above. With this update, you can use your TV remote controls to control various smart home devices connected to your home WiFi. For this update, we worked closely with all the hardware partners to optimize the app, such as Philips Hue, TP-Link, Philips Hue Lights, and Logitech Harmony. We also fixed several bugs and improved the overall experience, such as the discovery of compatible smart home devices. Read More The cloud storage company with a mission to make the world's most user-friendly storage service for personal and business use is launching a new free service. Dropbox is making its app available for the first time on Android TV, meaning that you can now use the Google Assistant, and even your TV remote control, to manage your Dropbox. By using the built-in voice search, with the voice options provided by the Google Assistant, you will be able to search and get a result for the files you are looking for. A file's address will be provided to you so that you can easily download it. The options will include “View,” “Remove,” “Easily sync,” “More info,” “Access,” “Delete,” “Archive,” and “Restore.” These are the operations that you can perform on your files with the help of your TV remote. The updated version is available for all Android TV devices running Android 5.0 or later. For those devices, the Dropbox app can now be used with your TV remote control. Read More
