Neural Networks: A Classroom Approach By Satish Kumar Q: Software for performing code analysis with customized rules and showing output as XML? I need to develop a framework which should analyze some code and giving a customized rules, then how can i do that? Can anyone suggest any software which can take customized rules/patterns and return output as an XML? A: You could use Resharper which will allow you to develop your own custom rule. R# is a powerful Java-based product that is used to check, format, document, refactor and other aspects of programming code with or without making changes to the underlying source code. The main idea behind R#'s functionality is to automatically analyze programs, detect and display coding patterns, and suggest corrections. It is possible to define custom logic to automate the detection of all kinds of problems from code, as well as to detect certain problems and perform refactoring without changing the underlying source code. You can also use GNU-sed to enhance the output XML file: sed -n '/pattern/p' file_name > file_name_with_rules

Dr. Dean Hurley told the South Florida Sun-Sentinel that he has received at least 10 calls or emails from women in the state since Tuesday. He said he understood that women are worried about taking dangerous drugs during early pregnancy and that he would help the women get the abortion referrals. The Florida Supreme Court has issued an emergency injunction, preventing the new law from taking effect until the courts have time to rule on it. Anti-abortion groups have sued and a judge hearing the case is expected to rule next week. The law requires doctors who provide abortions to do so only if they have a written, medically-justified reason to do so, such as if the woman has already suffered an ectopic pregnancy.
