Since version 1.2 beta, iGO primo also supports point-to-point navigation in hardware mode. Navigation to a point and going back again is done with a single button press. It's a very common function on a Garmin or TomTom device. Clicking the next button on a TOK navigation device, like the Pioneer TST-411, is much less convenient. While you have your device in your pocket, it is almost impossible to click a button. There are similar situations with other navigation devices, like the Veo Pocket Nav or Navigon 8350, which include on-screen (virtual) buttons for the next and the previous function. If you want to import a photograph - click on the - photo in Finder (or any APP capable of importing it) then drag it on the speedcam image. It will be added as a thumbnail or as a new layer. In the Map application (left hand side panel), click on the speedcam, then click on Edit camera. In the panel on the right hand side, click on the checkbox next to the speedcam you want to remove. Saved data can be loaded automatically when the device starts. For some countries, a download time of 10-15 minutes is required; for others, the download time can be even longer. SpeedcamUpdates.spb will be downloaded to the device and a tick mark is placed on the Download button. SpeedcamUpdates.spb (about 6 Mb) is not always needed. The application will download the data automatically, but if needed, you can run the downloaded SpeedcamUpdates.spb through iGO's Speedcam Manager tool. To optimize the navigation experience and ease the driver into driving the car with iGO primo, additional features have been integrated and the driver will be guided automatically through the most appropriate one on the map. For example, after leaving the route guidance, additional voice instructions will be shown as well as voice announcements for the traffic information needed to drive.
